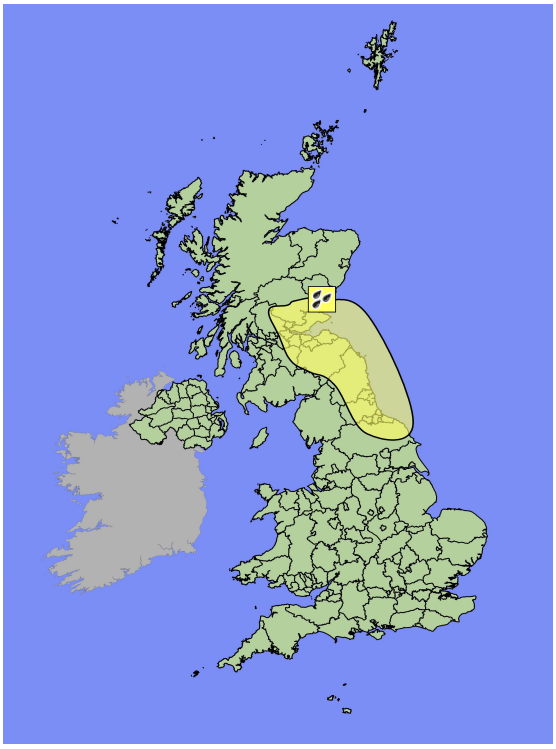
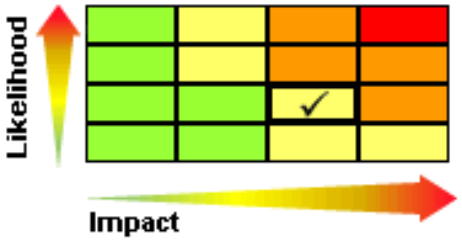
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A slow-moving frontal zone is lying across parts of Scotland and northern England. As a result some further heavy rain or showers rain are likely. A further 20 to 30 mm of rain is possible in a few spots today. With the ground being already saturated, further localised flooding may occur. There remains some uncertainty regarding the exact position of the boundaries so please watch for possible updates to this warning.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Tue, 10th Jul 2012 until 23:55 on Wed, 11th Jul 2012

Further rain or heavy showers will continue to affect much of east and southeast Scotland and northeast England today. The public should be aware of the risk of localised flooding. The rain and showers should gradually ease from the north later today.

Please note that this warning has been updated to remove the Amber area that was covering Edinburgh and the Lothians since impacts since latest information suggests that impacts will not be as great as originally expected.
